Where does your agency stand today?

Answer yes or no for each question. Every "No" is a gap this plan helps you close.

#	Question	Yes / No
1	Does every office have its own verified Google Business Profile?
2	Does each office show up in the Google Maps top 3 for "insurance agency near me" in its own town?
3	Do you ask every new client for a Google review, every time?
4	Does your website have a separate page for each office and each main line you write?

#	Question	Yes / No
5	Do you know how many quote requests your website brought in last month?
6	Are phone calls from your website and ads tracked back to where they came from?
7	If you run Google Ads, do you know your cost per quote, not just cost per click?
8	Do unbound quotes get follow-up after the first 30 days?
9	Do lapsed clients hear from you before their next renewal date?
10	Do you know how many of your households have only one policy with you?

DAYS 1–14

Phase 1: Build the foundation

Before spending a dollar on ads, make sure every lead can be seen, tracked and followed up. Skipping this step is the most common reason agency marketing "doesn't work".

01
Set up tracking

Track every quote form and every phone call from your website and Google profiles, so you can see which channel brought each lead.

02
Tune up each Google Business Profile

Correct categories, services for each line you write, real photos, consistent name, address and phone, and a link to that office's own page.

03

Start asking for reviews

Send a direct review link by text and email after every new policy and every smooth claim. Make it a habit for the whole team.

04

Pull your database

Export unbound quotes, lapsed policies and single-policy households from your agency management system. You'll use them in Phase 2.

DAYS 15–45

Phase 2: Go after quick wins

Now turn on the two channels that can produce quotes fastest: paid search for people ready to buy today, and follow-up with people who already know you.

Launch one focused Google Ads campaign

- Pick your best line and your strongest office or town
- Use tight keywords like "[line] insurance [town]" and block job seekers and claims searches
- Send clicks to a page about that one line, not your homepage
- Judge it on cost per quote after 30 days, not on clicks

Run your first reactivation test

- Start small: one segment, such as quotes from the last 6–12 months that didn't bind
- Send a short, personal email from a real person at your agency, offering a fresh comparison
- Only text people who have given consent, and always include opt-out
- Route every reply straight to a producer the same day

DAYS 46–90

Phase 3: Scale what works

By now you have real numbers. Put more behind the channels producing quotes at a cost you're happy with, and build the long-term assets that keep leads coming without paying per click.

- Build city and line pages for the searches your ads showed convert best, so you can win them for free over time
- Expand Google Ads to the next line or office, but only the ones with a good cost per quote
- Add a cross-sell sequence for single-policy households: auto-only clients get a home or umbrella review, and so on
- Extend reactivation to lapsed clients, timed 45–60 days before their old renewal date
- Start a monthly scorecard and review it with your team every month

YOUR SCORECARD

What to measure every month

Write down where you are today, then check again at day 90.

Number	Why it matters	Today	Day 90
Quote requests (calls + forms)	The best sign that marketing is working

Number	Why it matters	Today	Day 90
Cost per quote	Shows whether ads are worth the money
Quote-to-bind rate	Shows lead quality and follow-up
Google reviews (per office)	Helps you rank and get clicked
Premium won back from your database	Revenue you didn't have to buy leads for
Policies per household	Cross-sell progress that lifts retention
